Dead Sea Scrolls. EDOS hosts a Friday night dinner in his honor (RSVP requested). Professor Schiffman speaks Friday night after Kabbalat Shabbat (Mizmor Shir L'Yom HaShabbat, What Does It Have To Do With Shabbat), and at an oneg Shabbat following the dinner (The Other Dead Sea Scrolls: Manuscripts from Masada and the Bar Kochva Caves). On Shabbat, he speaks before Mussaf (Yaakov's Ladder in the Bayis Sheini Era, Rabbinic Literature, and Medieval Jewish Thought) and again at 7:30 PM (The Dead Sea Scrolls and the History of Halacha) followed by Q&A and a dessert reception. All talks are free and open to the public.

Shana Goldberg is looking for a volunteer to assist with the Motzoei Shabbat reception. Please contact her directly at s.r.goldberg@gmail.com.

Kiddush

Kiddush this week is sponsored by Jeff and Mindy Hecht, Tristan Hecht, Gillian Hecht, and Adam Sherman, in loving memory of Mindy's mother, Marilyn Tobin (מריל בת אברהם), on the occasion of her 41st yahrzeit.

Next Shabbat, to acknowledge Mrs. Evelyn Mendelsberg's contributions to the founding of EDOS, the shul makes a special tribute in her honor. In celebration of their Aunt Evelyn Mendelsberg's 100th Birthday, and the birth of their granddaughter Clara Chana Nisson, Perry and Penny Nisson are sponsoring the kiddush.

Dairy Bread (Part 1)

The Issue: The Gemara rules that one should not knead dough with milk. If one mixed milk into dough, consumption of that bread is forbidden. The reason is that bread is a food staple which is eaten with both dairy and meat. If we make dairy bread, a mistake of eating it with meat could easily occur.

Included in this halachah is…….

1. making bread with meat ingredients as it may be consumed with dairy.
2. even if the dairy was added unintentionally or without knowledge of this prohibition.
3. even if the dairy was added by a child or a non-Jew.

Two exemptions:

1. Small Amount: If the amount of dairy bread that was baked will be consumed in a short amount of time, it is permissible. The parameters of a short amount of time are the subject of a dispute between Shulchan Aruch and Rema (according to many commentators). According to Shulchan Aruch it refers to an amount small enough to be consumed in one meal; according to Rema, within one day (24 hours).
   - Aruch Hashulchan writes that this is dependent on family size. If the members of the household will collectively consume the bread in one day (or one meal according to Shulchan Aruch), it is permitted.
   - If one baked more than a small amount, he/she cannot just throw out the 'extra' bread; the entire batch is now considered non-Kosher.
2. Irregular Shape: The prohibition does not apply if the dough was baked in an irregular shape, as the shape will serve as a reminder that there is something different about this bread. Others will also be alerted that something is irregular and will be prompted to inquire.
   - A sign in the dough itself, such as etching in the word 'milk' also suffices.
   - Baking dough with visible cheese on top would also be permissible. Think of cheese or meat pizza!
   - The consensus of Poskim is that one cannot permit the bread after it is already baked by fashioning it in an unusual shape.

Points to Ponder:

1. Can I make donuts with milk as an ingredient?
2. May I consume bread which contains a minute amount of dairy (i.e. less than 1/60)?
